

Performance Support for Doctors in Training

Online Programme

Live Session 1
This one-hour introductory session will cover recognition and assessment of underperformance, reasons and causes for underperformance, and an initial approach to managing the situation.
Online modules
These modules can be accessed on demand through your college dashboard under “My Digital Learning” and must be completed prior to the second and final session.
Differential Attainment by Ethnicity in Medicine	Dr Kath Woolf, Associate Professor in Medical Education, UCL Medical School Lecture initially recorded for PULSE: the Academy of Clinical Educators Conference, RCPSG, March 2020
International Medical Graduates	International Medical Graduates Dr Mo Al-Haddad, Associate Postgraduate Dean (Quality), NHS Education for Scotland
The Role of the Performance Support Unit	Dr Greg Jones, Associate Postgraduate Dean (Professional Support), NHS Education for Scotland
Simulated Feedback Session When watching this session, please note down your thoughts on how the feedback giver approached the situation- what went well, what did not go well, how you might have approached the situation, differently- for discussion during the second live session	With thanks to Dr Daniel Lynagh, StR in Acute Medicine, West of Scotland
Live Session 2
The 1.5-hour final live session takes place on a Friday afternoon and will include reflections on the pre-recorded learning modules. This session will cover delivering difficult feedback with example cases, before finishing the session and course with a final round-up and summary. Please ensure to review all course materials prior to attending the final live session
