#cardiology2017
Interactive Cardiology Symposium

The fourth annual joint interactive cardiology symposium between the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Glasgow and the British Cardiovascular Society.

The 2017 programme is carefully designed to provide a forum where experts, cardiologists, trainees, physicians and allied health professionals can meet to discuss key contemporary challenging cardiology issues, with a case based format to emphasise the practical approach to clinically relevant topics.

Who should attend?
Cardiologists, physicians and trainees
Nurse practitioners
Allied Health Professionals
Senior management involved in cardiovascular care

“The format is great, with lectures followed by case discussion. This programme will support my clinical practice - patients will receive better care earlier”

“A superb event, captivating and enjoyable speakers and very well-attended. Really enjoyable day and a great opportunity to meet up and network with other colleagues. Looking forward to next year’s programme”

“Excellent overview of up to date guidance on common cardiovascular issues relevant to specialist and generalist alike”

This year’s programme will maintain its successful and popular interactive forum where cardiologists and all medical and allied health professionals with an interest in cardiology will have the opportunity to meet and directly interact with world class leading cardiology experts. The meeting will focus on key contemporary challenging cardiovascular issues. The popular case based format will be repeated this year, underpinning the programme’s practical approach to clinically relevant topics.

This hugely popular cardiovascular educational event provides a unique learning experience delivered in an open, supportive, enjoyable and friendly atmosphere. Expert chairs and cardiology opinion leaders from across the UK and Europe will present a comprehensive clinically relevant review of the lastest evidence, which is shaping the rapidly changing landscape of cardiovascular medicine and the subspecialities.
